

IE Collaboration Award

The IE Foundation, through IE University's Financial Aid Office, provides selective scholarships for talented and promising individuals accepted at IE University who exemplify our values and educational vision. In addition, we offer a tailor-made Financial Aid Program to help finance your studies at IE University. IE University aims to cultivate talent and develop students' unique value. Our objective is to ensure that individuals with outstanding achievements, excellent academic records, or who have excelled in other areas through personal effort and character, can study at IE University even if they do not have sufficient financial resources.

IE COLLABORATION AWARD

Application deadline	Before the beginning of the student's first year.
Geographical area:	All regions.
Programs:	All programs.
Description:	The IE Collaboration Award Scholarship offers financial aid to ambitious, talented individuals in exchange for their collaboration on a project at IE University. This project could be related to a wide range of areas such as admissions, marketing, academia, or communication. The project will be assigned by the IE Scholarship Committee based on the student's profile. When assigning the project, the Committee will evaluate the candidate's experience and skills, along with their professional aspirations. Once assigned, the student will sign a partnership agreement, which will establish their role in the project, the tasks they must carry out, the number of hours they must dedicate, and the expected quality of their work.
Selection criteria:	The Scholarship Committee will assess the candidate's personal and academic merit, motivations and interests, as well as their financial need.
Amount:	This scholarship can cover up to 75% of tuition fees.
Average work hours per week:	3-5 hours.

STUDENT TESTIMONIES

Eva Ziad Iskandarani

Bachelor in Business Administration
— Collaborator at the Admissions Department

My name is Eva Ziad Iskandarani. I am Palestinian; however, I have never been there. I was born and raised in Beirut, Lebanon. I never expected to be able to study in Spain, but I have always believed that life has its funny way of bringing everything together. This is my second year at IE University campus in Segovia studying the Bachelor in Business Administration. I will be moving to Madrid to start my third year in September.

Being a collaborator is about more than just going to events and being there. After two years of being an IE University ambassador, I have come to the realization that it provides you with a lot of underlying aspects that you discover by yourself at every event you attend.

Personally, my favorite part about being a collaborator is meeting the upcoming students who tend to be from very different backgrounds. I think people in general are very interesting, especially the way they speak about their ambitions and future plans. This becomes clear when you are a collaborator because you mix with different types of people, clarifying how much more there is to learn about the world every day.

Federica Caso

Bachelor in Design
— Collaborator at the
Marketing Department

I was born in the United States, although my family is half Italian, half Venezuelan. For the first 12 years of my life I lived in Caracas and later moved to Miami. In 2016 I moved to Florence, where I studied for a year and then I transferred to Segovia to start my studies at IE University. I'm currently a third year student in the Bachelor of Design program.

As a collaborator, I very much enjoy the opportunity to share my experiences at the university. I believe it is of great importance and value for incoming students to be able to learn about our journey at IE University and also feel supported by us, as current students, to guide them in such an exciting transition. Working closely with the staff and faculty has been enriching and pleasant. Being a collaborator has brought many positive experiences during my time at IE University. I have met an array of people and have attended numerous entertaining events. It is an incredible way to integrate and represent IE University's community.

Penélope Piraino

Bachelor in communications and Digital Media
— Collaborator at the
Creativity Center

My name is Penélope Piraino. I am 20 years old and was born and raised in Munich, Germany with British and Italian citizenship. I am currently a second year Bachelor in Communications and Digital Media student at Segovia Campus.

I am fortunate to be a collaborator for the IE Creativity Center in Segovia. My favorite part is volunteering and helping at the events that IE Creativity Center and Campus Life organize. They are a great opportunity for me to combine my role as a collaborator and connect with students and faculty members simultaneously. Working alongside my supportive mentor Juan Carlos Redondo, the IE Creativity Center Coordinator, has been very insightful. He's always open for ideas, input, and feedback from collaborators, which increases the value of future events!
